

Do you have a chronic condition/disability or care for someone who does?

The UBC Health Mentors Program is looking for Health Mentors to share their medical expertise with our healthcare students.

The UBC Health Mentors Program is a 9-month volunteer program in which adult mentors and/or caregivers meet 7 times with a small team of UBC students. Health Mentors are experts in their health and want to share their experiences living with a chronic condition. Students are new healthcare professionals who learn about patient-centered care and how providers can better support people with chronic conditions.

By being a Health Mentor you are joining a pioneering program contributing to the education of health professionals. Health Mentors should live in the Metro Vancouver area and be comfortable talking about their health condition. The program runs September 2023 to May 2024.

For more information and to apply to be a Health Mentor, please see our website:

<https://meetingofexperts.org/programs-activities/health-mentors-program/>

Email the Program Coordinator: jen.macdonald@ubc.ca

Patient & Community
Partnership for Education